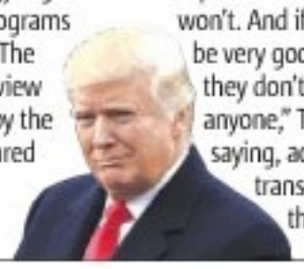
TRUMP PRESSURES CHINA BEFORE XI TALKS

1 President Donald Trump held out the possibility of using trade as a lever to secure Chinese cooperation against North Korea and said Washington might deal with Pyongyang's nuclear and missile programs on its own if need be. The comments, in an interview published on Sunday by the Financial Times, appeared designed to pressure Chinese President Xi Jinping ahead of his visit to Trump's Mar-a-Lago resort in Florida this week. "China has great influence over North Korea. And China will either decide to help us with North Korea, or they won't. And if they do that will be very good for China, and if they don't it won't be good for anyone," Trump was quoted as saying, according to an edited transcript published by the newspaper. REUTERS



NATIONAL SECURITY AIDES N. KOREA POLICY REVIEW

2 President Donald Trump's top national security aides have completed a broad review of U.S. options aimed at countering North Korea's nuclear and missile programs, a senior U.S. official said on Sunday. The review, which was accelerated to have it done before Trump's summit with Chinese President Xi Jinping this week, includes a range of economic and military measures but leans toward new sanctions and increased pressure on Beijing to rein in its neighbor, the official said. The list of recommendations was put together by Trump's National Security Council on his orders and was ready for his consideration, the officials said, speaking on condition of anonymity. It was not immediately clear if the review had reached Trump's desk or how quickly he would decide on a course of action. REUTERS

PRIZED 1804 US DOLLAR SELLS FOR $3.3 MILLION

3 An 1804 U.S. silver dollar sold for $3.3 million in one of a series of auctions that brought in a record total of more than $100 million for a renowned private coin collection, organizers said. The silver dollar, one of only eight of its kind, was snapped up at auction in Baltimore. It was one of more than 200 coins sold at the event. The auction series, beginning in 2015, generated a total of nearly $107 million in sales, according to Stack's Bowers Galleries, which conducted the auctions along with Sotheby's. The collection belonged to Dallas real estate developer Mack Pogue and his son Brent, who had collected coins since the 1970s. Coin dealers Kevin Lipton of California and John Albanese of New Jersey jointly bought the prized silver dollar. REUTERS

ARREST IN SEX ASSAULT SEEN ON FACEBOOK LIVE

5 Chicago authorities said they had arrested a 14-year-old boy in connection with the sexual assault of a teenage girl by multiple young men that was seen on Facebook Live in March. "Tonight, Chicago Police Department arrested the first of several juvenile offenders in the Facebook sexual assault incident," the department's chief spokesman Anthony Guglielmi said on Twitter. The mother of the victim of the March assault had approached police after an unrelated news conference and shown them images of her daughter being assaulted by five or six young men. The mother said the girl's uncle had told her about a video on Facebook Live that showed the assault. The high school freshman had gone to the store and her mother became concerned when she did not return. REUTERS

GRAND LARCENY, COURT SEAT

ELLIS HENICAN

Opinion

Ellis Henican is a seasoned observer of the nation's political and social landscape. He has appeared as a commentator on CNN, MSNBC and Fox News. He is a former columnist at Newsday. Follow him @henican

The Senate Judiciary Committee is weighing the nomination of federal appellate judge Neil Gorsuch to the Supreme Court. GETTY IMAGES

If someone robbed your house, would you drive the thief to the pawn shop?

So why should Democrats help deliver Neil Gorsuch onto the Supreme Court? That seat is stolen property, too.

That, when all the lesser arguments are stripped away, is the best argument Democrats have as Senate Republicans try to install the silver-haired Gorsuch as the high court's fifth conservative justice. Doesn't the seat belong to Merrick Garland, the eminently qualified Court of Appeals judge who was nominated by Barack Obama last March, only to be denied a vote or even a hearing by Republican leader Mitch McConnell?

Given how Republicans froze out Garland, why should Democrats cooperate this time, even if Gorsuch has a nice résumé and an uncanny resemblance to an actor in one of those erectile-dysfunction ads?

I wasn't the commentator who first noticed that. But it's true. The smooth-talking, right-leaning jurist has the exact same twinkle and the same unthreatening tone. Now, he's putting the moves on Senate Democrats like they're a party of babeish 40-year-olds.

Doesn't "no" mean no anymore?

There will be an important hearing today in the Senate Judiciary Committee. Republicans will tout Gorsuch's fine credentials and advance his nomination to the Senate floor. But the Republicans still need 60 votes to overcome a Democratic filibuster. On Sunday, Sen. Joe Donnelly of Indiana became only the third Democrat to fold. That only gets the Republicans to 55.

There are bare-knuckle options on both sides. McConnell threatens to unleash the "nuclear option," if he can get 50 of his fellow Republicans to go along. "One way or another," the Republican leader vows, Gorsuch will be confirmed this week. Democratic leader Chuck Schumer, still smarting from last year's home invasion, is taunting his Republican counterpart: Go ahead and try!

There is an answer to this so's-your-mother back-and-forth, the kind of bipartisan deal that used to get made all the time in Washington. Give this nomination to the man who deserves it, the dissed Merrick Garland, and let Neil Gorsuch — credentials, charm and all — come back the next time a high-court seat is empty.

That would be sensible and fair. Does this one really have to be settled at the pawn shop?

A-Rod has a few words to say about J-Lo

Alex Rodriguez has nothing but nice things to say in very short sentences about his new girlfriend, Jennifer Lopez. These words will either warm your heart or make you wonder whether or not A-Rod has an advanced grasp on the English language.

According to Us Weekly, the 41-year-old broke his silence about his relationship, and it's pretty clear he is begging for someone to buy him a thesaurus.

On whether or not he and Lopez are having a good time: "It's obvious. We've been having a great time. We're having a good time."

Is she a girl, or a woman? "She's an amazing, amazing girl."

What's your grasp on adverbs like? "I mean, she's a very, very simple person."

What about complete sentences, do you use those ever? "Loves family. Is a great sister. Is a great daughter." Okay!

The two started quietly dating earlier this year. They reportedly like each other mostly because they both have Latin roots and children. Truly inspiring.

Brad Pitt returns to his peak form

Brad Pitt is in the news again, and you won't believe why.

The actor, 53, has been going through a very dramatic divorce and custody battle with Angelina Jolie.That's something that can really mess with your self-esteem, you know? So the "War Machine" star decided to focus on himself. I imagine Pitt's decision to look inward has been inspired by his therapist, his sculptor friend, Bon Iver and probably the guy who works at his favorite gyro stand.

Pitt thought to himself: "When was I happiest? I mean, when was I at my best? Before Angelina came in and saved me, then ruined me?" At first, looking in the mirror, he thought, "Was it me in 'Meet Joe Black'?" But then he thought deeper, harder. "No. It was me in 'Fight Club,' where I acted my nicely shaped butt off, and also had a phenomenal six-pack that glistened, even when there was no light."

Pitt vowed to return to himself at his peak: "Fight Club"-era Pitt.

E! News is reporting that Brad Pitt has stepped out in Los Angeles looking thinner and fitter than ever, and based on what I know, I assume this is why.

Shia LaBeouf won't face court for fighting Nazis

Shia LaBeouf, king of problematic faves, will not be charged for attacking a Nazi. It is 2017.

According to Entertainment Weekly, assault charges against the "American Honey" actor have been dropped. LaBeouf was charged with misdemeanor assault and a harassment violation in late January after allegedly attacking a 25-year-old white supremacist during a protest against President Donald Trump. LaBeouf was given a pre-arraignment dismissal, citing insufficient evidence.

The alleged victim said to LaBeouf that "Hitler did nothing wrong," at the actor's interactive, anti-Trump art instillation, "HE WILL NOT DIVIDE US." In response, the actor shoved him away. LaBeouf then allegedly pulled the man's scarf, which scratched the victim's face, so you know. He pressed charges.

May LaBeouf lead us in the fight against other things that have no business in our modern times: discrimination, the black plague, and whatever is going on with Mike Pence.

Odd couple Naya Rivera and David Spade spotted cuddling

Naya Rivera is reportedly dating David Spade because the apocalypse is nigh and it's the time to explore all of our deepest, darkest fantasies.

E! Online has photos of the two getting extremely cozy at the Halekulani Hotel pool in Waikiki. Rivera, 30, and Spade, 52, met on the set of an upcoming comedy, "Mad Families." A source assures E! that the relationship is not at all fake, or an April Fool's joke.

They're an odd couple, sure, but stranger things have happened. Rihanna went on a date with Shia LaBeouf, once. In the last 20 years, Johnny Depp transformed from a totally bangable eccentric into a pile of dingy scarves with googly eyes rimmed with day-old mascara on top. Donald Trump successfully ran for president of the United States.

Potential idols

Dylan Minnette, left, and Katherine Langford star in the series "13 Reasons Why," now streaming on Netflix. NETFLIX

"13 Reasons Why" stars Dylan Minnette and Katherine Langford are about to blow up.

LUCÍA HERNÁNDEZ
MWN
letters@metro.us

Netflix's new drama "13 Reasons Why," based on the young-adult novel by Jay Asher, follows Clay Jensen (Dylan Minnette), a teenager who returns home from school to find a mysterious box with his name on it. Inside he finds tapes recorded by his classmate Hannah Baker (Katherine Langford), who committed suicide two weeks earlier. On the recordings, Hannah explains the 13 reasons that led her to end her life.

We spoke with the two 20-year-old rising stars about working with executive producer Selena Gomez and how they think the show will help spread awareness about adolescent-mental-health issues.

The show tackles pretty heavy subject matter. What research did you do for the role?

Dylan Minnette: They brought psychiatrists and consultants to the pre-production and during shooting. We also had the opportunity to talk with people who have had real life experience with these issues. That certainly helped us gain awareness.

Katherine Langford: The producers were exceptional and were very accommodating. They were aware that it would be six months of filming and that we are young actors. At least for me, this is my first job! I felt like they gave us all the necessary resources.

How will the show educate viewers about teen depression and suicide?

DM: From watching Hannah's character specifically, I want [viewers] to realize that the smallest thing you do, from a random act of kindness to the slightest snub, can impact someone else's life, for better or for worse.

KL: I think it's normal to feel isolated or under pressure during the last years of high school: You're trying to understand who you are and what you want to do in the future, and that is a lot to process no matter how old you are. But that's not the same thing as being depressed or suicidal. That's where we need more education, to know when a person needs help; and not everyone who gets depressed goes down the same path as Hannah. But the truth is that too many young people do. And I think we can all agree that teen suicide is a tragedy and we as a society need to find ways to address it.

What was it like working with Selena Gomez?

DM: She has been really supportive of us, not only in terms of the show but also how we manage our social networks and what will happen once the series premieres. She more than anyone knows what it means to live your life in the public eye and I think she has been incredible in helping to prepare us for what comes next.

Are you ready for fame?

KL: I'll know when it happens. [Laughs]

DM: Ask me in the next interview.

5 Examples of Hollywood white-washing

This week sees the release of "Ghost in the Shell." It's a huge movie — one of the year's priciest, starring one of our splashiest names, Scarlett Johansson. And yet right there is the problem: The white, American actress is playing a cyborg hero who, in the beloved anime and manga upon which the film is based, was, of course, Japanese. MATT PRIGGE

GETTY IMAGES

"Othello" (1965)

Over the centuries, Shakespeare's "Moor of Venice" has been played by countless white actors, including Anthony Hopkins in a 1981 BBC production. But few went all-in on the blackface the way Laurence Olivier did in this 1965 film. It wasn't enough for him to bathe his face in burnt cork. The acting god also adopted a "black" voice, reciting the Bard's words in a manner that can make you cringe in iambic pentameter.

"Short Circuit" (1986)

Fisher Stevens has done a lot of good; last year he directed "Before the Flood," a climate change doc starring Leonardo DiCaprio. When he was younger, though, he applied brownface and an over the top accent to play Ben Jabituya, the Indian scientist who, along with Steve Guttenberg, helps create wisecracking robot Johnny 5. How bad were the '80s? So bad that Stevens reprised the role, this time as the lead, in "Short Circuit 2."

FOX

"Breakfast at Tiffany's" (1961)

Any casual viewing of the Audrey Hepburn classic is periodically made uncomfortable whenever Mickey Rooney shows up. He's Mr. Yunioshi, Holly Golightly's easily annoyed neighbor. Never one to do anything by half measures, the legend goes all-in with the broad Asian stereotypes, complete with giant teeth and overly squinted eyes.

PARAMOUNT PICTURES

MARVEL

"Doctor Strange" (2016)

Tackling a dodgy source birthed in 1963 — with a white character traveling to Asia and literally stealing another culture's magic — Hollywood did what it could. It even turned the training grounds of Kamar-Taj into an international club. You could even argue that it's not even a bad thing that the Ancient One — a straight-up "Oriental" stereotype — is now a Celtic mystic played by a hairless Tilda Swinton. But we still have a long way to go, as you can tell by "Ghost in the Shell."

"Pan" (2015)

Less than a year after "Exodus"-gate, Rooney Mara was playing Tiger Lily, Peter Pan's beloved Native American Neverland bud. To her credit Mara admitted that taking the role didn't make her "feel great," even if she did ultimately decide the skeeziness was outweighed by her desire to be in a highly unusual twist on a classic. But it wasn't worth it: "Pan" was hated by critics and ignored by audiences, and it went down as one of the priciest bombs in movie history.

JOBS OF THE FUTURE

A great salary is just one benefit of becoming an occupational therapist

HOW TO GET AHEAD

Jobs are plentiful in this rapidly expanding rehabilitation field

SARA FEINSTEIN
@SaraBFeinstein
sara.feinstein@metro.us

Consistently ranked as one of the most recession-proof jobs, occupational therapy offers more than just stability. It also boasts a great starting salary (about $53,000), flexibility and overall job satisfaction.

Even better, the field is rapidly growing. The Bureau of Labor Statistics estimates that occupational-therapist jobs are expected to increase 27 percent between 2014 and 2024 (much higher than average) and 30,400 positions will need to be filled in that time.

We spoke to Karen Jacobs, a clinical professor of occupational therapy at Boston University and a practicing occupational therapist to find out more about the field.

What does an OT do?

As a health and rehabilitation profession, the main role of an occupational therapist is to help injured, ill or disabled people of all ages — from newborns, to the elderly — regain their ability to perform everyday tasks, says Jacobs.

Their exact role, however, depends on the sort of issues the patient is dealing with, whether it be mental, physical, emotional or developmental. After assessing the patient, the OT will map out a plan to help the patients meet their goals, which can range anywhere from being able to brush their teeth or grasp a pencil, to walking steadily.

Jacobs explains it as, "We focus on what we call 'occupations', which are these meaningful everyday activities that people do."

Breaking into the field

There are two routes to enter the profession, says Jacobs: You can train to be an occupational therapist or an occupational therapist assistant.

On the assistant level, students need to complete a two-year program that's typically offered at variety of community colleges, and then pass the national certification exam before becoming a certified occupational therapy assistant.

An occupational therapist must have a master's degree or doctorate in occupational therapy. They must also complete two, three-month fieldwork programs, she explains, "which, depending on the program, could be after all of your course work is done, or be integrated in during your schooling." After that, students must pass the National Board for Certification in Occupational Therapy exam (NBCOT), and apply for a license in the states they want to practice in.

Expectations as tall as the Green Monster

The Red Sox are expected to improve on last year's 93 wins.

MATT BURKE
@burke_metro
matthew.burke@metro.us

David Ortiz is gone, but the Red Sox' championship expectations remain the same. The Sox are not only the favorites to win the American League East this season, but they have the third best Las Vegas odds of winning the whole damn thing.

Westgate Las Vegas Superbook has the Sox with the third best odds of winning the 2017 World Series at 10-1. The Cleveland Indians, who swept the Sox out of the playoffs last fall, have 12-1 odds, and the reigning champion Cubs have 3-1 odds.

It's hard to imagine this loaded Red Sox roster not being able to at least win the division, but there do remain some big question marks — starting with the obvious. Who will be able to replace David Ortiz's production in the heart of the Boston order?

It won't be one man, of course, but the Red Sox' heart of the order committee looks promising. Andrew Benintendi (.295 BA, 2 HR, 14 RBI in 2016), Mookie Betts (.318, 31 HR, 113 RBI), Hanley Ramirez (.286, 30 HR, 111 RBI) and Xander Bogaerts (.294, 21 HR, 89 RBI) will all need to at least put up similar numbers that they put up last season — when the Sox scored the most runs in the majors. Benintendi's sample size is small for sure, as he only played in 34 games last season. But the 22-year-old is a favorite to win AL Rookie of the Year and he hit .344 with a .423 OBP in spring training.

"He's extremely poised," Red Sox manager John Farrell said of Benintendi. "I think everyone is looking forward to one, if not many years of a very good player that's been on a rapid ascent into the big leagues and has handled everything in stride."

Near the bottom of the Red Sox order is third baseman Pablo Sandoval, who had just six at-bats a season ago. The slimmed-down Panda looked like he was five years younger in spring training, batting .338 with five home runs and 20 RBIs in 21 games. If the Sox can get him to bat around .285 this season, it should be considered a win.

Arms race

When the Red Sox acquired Chris Sale this past December, there was a train of thought that the Sox should consider trading away some pitching. They did deal Clay Buchholz to Philadelphia, but even then it was like, "They're going to have to put one of these guys in the bullpen … they have too many starters."

As tired as the old saying "you can never have enough pitching" is, it might be the most accurate cliche in all of sports. David Price will begin the season on the disabled list with a bum elbow and is not expected back until early May. Therefore, the Steven Wrights (13-6, 3.33 ERA in 2016), Drew Pomeranzes (11-12, 3.32 ERA) and Eduardo Rodriguezes (3-7, 4.71 ERA) of the world will still be a part of the rotation — at least to start.

Projected lineup

1. Dustin Pedroia
2. Andrew Benintendi
3. Mookie Betts
4. Hanley Ramirez
5. Xander Bogaerts
6. Mitch Moreland
7. Jackie Bradley Jr.
8. Pablo Sandoval
9. Sandy Leon

Rick Porcello will get the Opening Day nod at Fenway today (2:05 p.m., NESN), a salute to the fact that he won the AL Cy Young Award last season.

But it's clear who the Red Sox' "ace" is.

The expectations for Sale are through the roof, as — now with a potent batting lineup to have his back — there's no reason to think he can't flirt with 20 wins this year.

Last year, Sale went 17-10 (3.34 ERA, 233 Ks) – matching his career high in wins.

At just 28-years-old, the golden arm southpaw is just entering his prime.

He will make his Boston debut Wednesday against Pittsburgh.

Betts, Bogaerts thriving as Boston's new 'Killer B's' combination

Boston's young studs have blossomed into All-Star vets.

JOE PANTORNO
@MetroBOS
sports@metro.us

At the dawn of the 2017 Major League Baseball season, the Red Sox are looking like a legitimate World Series contender with one of the most well-rounded rosters in the league.

With the addition of Chris Sale to David Price and reigning American League Cy Young Award winner Rick Porcello, Boston's top three starters are a nightmare for opposing offenses.

The Red Sox offense packs quite a punch of its own though, and much of it has to do with the rise of shortstop Xander Bogaerts and right fielder Mookie Betts.

Both 24-year-old stars are entering new territory in 2017 as the prime faces of the Red Sox lineup. Their largest source of protection, David Ortiz, retired after having the most successful season as a 40-year-old in MLB history with 38 home runs and 127 RBIs.

While it remains to be seen how the two young bats of Boston's lineup will respond with just Hanley Ramirez and Jackie Bradley as support, they certainly look capable of reproducing their stellar 2016 seasons.

Out of nowhere, Bogaerts developed into one of the top power-hitting shortstops in the league with 21 home runs and 89 RBIs. His previous career high was 12 round trippers in 2014.

A lot of that can be attributed to his newfound strength. At a somewhat unassuming 6-foot-1, 210 pounds, Bogaerts showed last year that he could get his hands inside and turn on the ball for power.

He's not shy at the plate either, making contact with 67 percent of pitches thrown outside the strike zone, per fangraphs.com.

It helped spark a 26-game hit streak, garner a first-ever All-Star Game selection and Silver Slugger Award.

Betts went to his first All-Star Game and won his first Silver Slugger as well, but he had a legitimate shot at becoming the 11th player in Red Sox history to win the American League MVP.

COMBINED RBI FOR BETTS AND BOGAERTS LAST YEAR

He launched 31 home runs and added 113 RBIs with a .318 batting average, finishing second in the MVP voting behind Mike Trout of the Los Angeles Angels of Anaheim.

While those gaudy stats are impressive for a middle-of-the-order bat, it was even more impressive that most of those numbers came from the leadoff spot.

Betts has found a way to hit for power to all fields, making it difficult for opposing pitchers to key in on any one part of the zone.

No matter where they throw, he will most likely get a good swing on it.

With Ortiz gone, expect Betts to make his way down toward the middle of the lineup and possibly bat cleanup with Bogaerts in front of him. Given their youth and meteoric rise to the top of Major League Baseball, these new "Killer B's" could be the headliners of another golden era in Boston.

Sox with a different looking bullpen in 2017

After Craig Kimbrel, the Sox' bullpen looks "iffy."

JAMES TOSCANO
@Jimmy_Toscano
sports@metro.us

For the second straight offseason, the Red Sox made a trade to strengthen their bullpen. And for the second straight season, that player has found himself on the disabled list to begin that season.

Last year, it was Carson Smith, who the Red Sox acquired in a deal that sent Wade Miley to Seattle. This year, it's Tyler Thornburg, who the Red Sox acquired in a deal that sent Travis Shaw to Milwaukee. Smith suffered a strain of his flexor mass muscle during 2016 spring training, was placed on the DL and then activated in early May. He lasted just three outings before going back on the DL and undergoing Tommy John surgery, of which he's still recovering from today.

The hope is that Thornburg's injury, which is an impingement of his right shoulder, will not end up as something more serious. Like Smith, the Sox had high hopes that Thornburg would be the setup man for Craig Kimbrel. Now, however, it'll be a bit of a patchwork job right out of the gates.

Not ideal.

But the show must go on.

Proven Talent

Craig Kimbrel — Kimbrel is the only real name in this bullpen, as the Sox closer looks to rebound after coming off of a down year, where he went 2-6 with a 3.40 ERA and 31 saves, career lows since he became a full-time closer in 2011.

Potential

Heath Hembree — Hembree had a breakout year for the Sox last season, striking out 47 batters in 51 innings (38 appearances) and finishing with a 2.65 ERA. Only Ziegler finished with a lower ERA among relievers who made over 30 appearances.

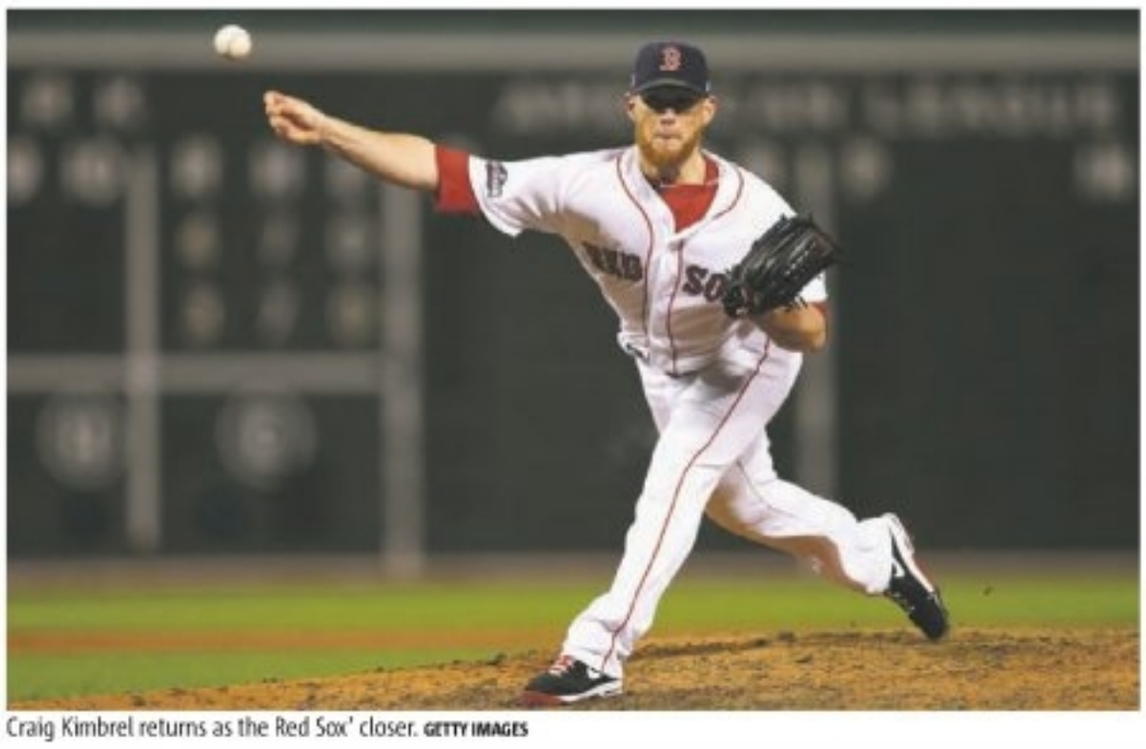
Robby Scott — There's certainly not a ton to base it off of, but so far the Sox have to like what they've seen from lefty Scott. Scott made his MLB debut last September for Boston, and did not give up a run over seven appearances (6.0 IP). This spring he has shown similar success, as Scott lead all Sox relievers in ERA with 0.77 — and that's on a team-high 12 appearances, too.

Robbie Ross Jr. — Also returning and looking to improve on a solid 2016 is Ross Jr., one of three lefties in this bullpen, who finished 2016 with the second lowest WHIP of his career (1.27).

Question marks

Joe Kelly — Kelly has shown flashes of dominance with a four-seam fastball that can touch the high 90s regularly, but has struggled with command over the years.

Matt Barnes — The 6-foot-4 Barnes has had an up-and-down career with Boston, but perhaps a strong spring training is a sign of things to come. In 9.2 innings, Barnes had an ERA of 0.93 with 13 strikeouts.



Craig Kimbrel returns as the Red Sox' closer. GETTY IMAGES

Bladder Pain

LEADERSHIP 301

urinary urgency, and/or frequency?

a research study for Interstitial Cystitis/ Bladder Pain Syndrome may be right for you

Interstitial cystitis, also known as bladder pain syndrome (IC/BPS), is a bladder disease with symptoms that include, bladder pain, urinary urgency (feeling a strong need to urinate), and urinary frequency (having to urinate often).

Living with IC/BPS can be challenging. There is currently no cure for IC/BPS, and effective treatment options are limited.

The LEADERSHIP 301 Trial is a clinical research study evaluating an investigational drug to see if it will reduce the bladder pain of IC/BPS and relieve other symptoms such as urinary frequency. The study drug is a new type of medication that may help reduce inflammation in the bladder.

You may qualify if you:

- Are between the ages of 18 and 80
- Have been diagnosed with IC/BPS for at least 3-months
- Consistently experience bladder pain and frequent, urgent trips to the bathroom

Qualified participants will receive study drug and all study-related care at no charge.

Aries Channel your emotions into work. Get things done behind the scenes and master what you want to pursue. An overreaction will cause problems with relationships.

Taurus Discuss your choices with someone you trust. Learn from people with experience, but thoroughly examine the information offered to you.

Gemini Stay on top of what others say, and get offers or promises in writing. If you want to bring about change, get approval before you begin. Avoid conflicts with partners.

Cancer Refrain from making an erratic move based on hearsay or peer pressure. Channel your energy into creative, innovative ideas and plans that will help you get ahead.

Leo Don't complain or criticize. It's in your best interest to make personal changes. Put more time into learning and applying what you discover to improve your life and future.

Virgo A little give-and-take and sincerity will bring you closer to your loved ones. Don't be afraid to be different. Home and health issues should be taken seriously.

Libra Don't give up or let your emotions take control. Keep your feet on the ground and stick to basics. Walk away from excessive people, and don't make compensations.

Scorpio A creative outlet will stimulate your mind and lead to all sorts of new possibilities. Serious discussions and personal changes look rewarding.

Sagittarius Indecisiveness will surface if you can't decide how you feel about someone. Consider the consequences and do your best to quantify the ideal way to move forward.

Capricorn Don't let others' actions discourage you. Do your own thing and don't feel obligated to take part in something you find risky. Make personal changes.

Aquarius Don't let the past haunt you. You need to recognize certain insincere gestures of friendliness. Someone using emotional blackmail will try to take advantage of you.

Pisces Do your thing and stop worrying about what others think. You cannot please everyone, but you can master the art of personal happiness. EUGENIA LAST
